CONTEXT

This unit aims to help you start thinking of how you use celebrities and other role models to shape your identity and character as a teenager.

It asks you to approach critically any role model or celebrity on the understanding that you already know and accept yourself.

Furthermore, this unit offers you practice in a number of oral, written, reading and visual activities to improve your language and communicative abilities.

Please ensure that you hand in the Learner's Book after each lesson.

TASK 1 GROUP DISCUSSION WITH REPORT BACK (60 minutes)
LO 1: AS 2; LO 2: AS 4

Marks: 20

The purpose of this task is for you to be able to:

- Learn vocabulary around the theme of celebrities and role models in order to speak, read and write in the activities which follow
- Start thinking critically about the topic
- Develop your listening skills

Your teacher will guide you through the following class and group discussion. It is important that you be a good listener and participant in the class discussion. Respect people's views and show others respect.

TASK 1 GROUP DISCUSSION WITH REPORT BACK (60 minutes) LO1: AS 2; LO 2: AS 4

Marks: 20

Your teacher will divide you into groups for this activity. It is very important once again to listen to others during this activity. Your teacher will assess the feedback given by each group.

Your group must choose any two photographs of celebrities below. Make sure you all agree that they are role models for teenagers. Also, add one of your own. Make a list of three reasons for each of your choices and prepare to give feedback to the class on your choices by choosing spokespersons.

TASK 2.1 RESPONSE TO A MAGAZINE ARTICLE LO 3: AS 1, 3, 4

(30 minutes)

Marks: 20

A Magazine Article

Read through the following magazine article on Gcina Mhlophe's admiration for the international South African celebrity, Miriam Makeba.

In this article Gcina Mhlophe explains why Miriam Makeba moves her.

- 1. The first time I ever heard her sing, I stood very still. I was in my teens and, together with my older sister, I lifted my voice proudly to match hers. 'Iyaguduza le ndoda' which means 'a piece of ground' echoed in my ears.
- 2. Oh, the pride we felt when we first managed to get a picture of Miriam Makeba, our empress of song. It was the mid-70s, and as she was banned in this country, her music was not available. You could not hope to tune into a song of hers on the radio. Yet she was larger than life; she signified a dream that felt so strong within us.
- 3. By the time I went to live and work in Johannesburg as a young adult, Makeba had become a great international ambassador. Her banned music was recorded and re-recorded onto cassette tapes that we guarded jealously. We listened to her voice reverently, and her lyrics were so true to the circumstances she had experienced that we were still experiencing. Even today, songs like 'West Wind' or 'Gauteng' make my heart ache.
- 4. I shared the pain she endured when the apartheid government refused her entry to South Africa to bury her late mother; I also understood her anguish about being banished from her home, and the excruciating sorrow of losing her beloved daughter, Bongi, who was a singer in her own right. But in spite of all that, Mama Africa still kept our flag flying high the world over.
- 5. Back home, we heard about the many countries that gave her citizenship and adored her like their own daughter. We marvelled at the versatility she displayed at learning other languages, and then using them to sing her songs so hauntingly. The messages of joy and hope that she shared with us through her music lifted our spirits. She became our sister, our mother, our role model and our pride.
- 6. As a performing artist myself, I've worked in many of the same countries as Miriam Makeba, and I've encountered international audiences who regard her with true admiration. I've been lucky enough to see her on stage at full throttle on several occasions. I often stop and think, 'We are blessed to have her.' Her dedication to her art, the love she has for her country, her professionalism and, most of all, her staying power, are all worth applauding.

- 7. After all these years she is still ranked among the very best the world of music has ever seen. Her voice never fails to enchant me and inspire me to greater things. When I listen to her music, I feel good all over. She is like a good wine that gets better and better with age.
- 8. Viva Mama Africa, our great empress of song.

TASK 2.3 A POEM (60 minutes) LO 3: AS 5, 6, 8; LO 4: AS 1; LO 5: AS 4

Marks: 20

Many people would regard their parents or guardians as role models.

Read through the following poem with your teacher, and then attempt the activity, which follows, in groups of two.

My fa	My father began as a god by Ian Mudie
My father began as a god full of heroic tales of days when he was young. His laws were immutable as if brought down from Sinai which indeed he thought they were.	5
He fearlessly lifted me to heaven by a mere swing to his shoulder, and made me a godling by seating me astride our milch-cow's back, and, too upon the great white gobbler of which others went in constant fear.	10
Strange then how he shrank and shrank until by my time of adolescence he had become a foolish small old man with silly outmoded views of life and morality.	15
Stranger still that as I became older his faults and his intolerances scaled away into the past, revealing virtues such as honesty, generosity, integrity.	20
Strangest of all how the deeper he recedes into the grave the more I see myself as just one more of the little men who creep through life	25 e
not knee-high to this long-dead god.	30

PRE-TASK ACTIVITY

Discuss with your partner how the speaker's view of his father has changed over time. You should also explain why you think it has changed.

Then discuss how your view of your parent/guardian/caregiver has changed. Also, give reasons for this change.

TASK

On the next page, you are individually going to represent the poem visually.

You must complete a drawing which successfully captures the view the speaker has of his father at the different stages of his life. Your drawing should use both LITERAL and FIGURATIVE/SYMBOLIC elements. Also pay attention to the size of the objects in your visual (colour could also be used). You will then be required to write a paragraph of 90 - 100 words comparing the speaker in the poem's view of his father with your view of any family role model.

Your teacher will assess your work according to the following marking grid:

Level	0-1	2	3	4
Content	Totally inaccurate.	Many	Minor inaccuracies.	Accurate.
LO 3: AS 5, 6, 8		inaccuracies.
Level	0-2	3	4-5	6
Figurative Content LO 5: AS 4	No, or negligible, figurative elements.	Attempted to use figurative elements, but major lapses that detract from presentation.	Figurative elements used, but some minor lapses that detract in some small ways from presentation.	Figurative elements used appropriately.

TASK 3 INVESTIGATION (30 minutes (or 2 periods for larger classes))
AND PRESENTATION
LO 5: AS 3; LO 2: AS 5

Marks: 30

The purpose of this task is for you to be able to:

- Develop your ability to research information and present it in an interesting and effective way
- Introduce a speaker

Introducing a Speaker

You need to research the life and career of your favourite celebrity or role model. You may not research someone you know personally. Once you have prepared your information, you will then imagine that your famous person or role model has been asked to be a guest speaker at your school's prize giving ceremony. You have been invited to introduce the speaker briefly to the school. You will be required to present this speech to the class.

After your teacher has explained the task to the class and read through the rubric, you will have a short class discussion to outline briefly possible places to find information. You will also discuss possible strategies for presenting such a speech.

- Although the audience will not be there to hear you speak, you need to set the stage for the speaker. Treat the job seriously by preparing thoroughly.
- Use the TIS Approach:
 - T = Topic: What will the speaker be talking about?
 - I = Importance: Why is it important for the audience to listen to this speaker?
 Relate the topic to them.
 - S = Speaker: Who the speaker is and why this speaker for this topic?

These are the questions you must answer for your audience in your speech.

- When you approach the lectern look positive. Stand confidently and smile. Pause until your audience is absolutely silent.
- Look at the audience. State your name and point out that you are privileged to be able to introduce the guest speaker. Don't make jokes as the audience is not there to hear you speak, unless the joke is truly appropriate.
- Read your introduction, pausing to make eye contact with the audience.
- State the speaker's name at the end. Do not read this. Make sure you pronounce it correctly. Emphasise the first name and then say the surname out louder, whilst moving your arm to indicate the speaker. This will build the audience to a natural applause. Show delight in your face.

TASK 4 NARRATIVE WRITING LO 4: AS 1, 3, 4; LO 6: AS 2

(90 minutes)

Marks: 40

The purpose of this task is for you to be able to:

- Plan your writing and realise that it is a process which requires mind mapping/spider diagram, proofreading and editing
- Understand and apply the principles of writing a story

You are going to write an essay of 300 - 350 words on the following topic:

Imagine that you have spent a day with your chosen celebrity. Write about this day.

Your teacher will revise some techniques for approaching this essay.

Use the following pointers to write a narrative essay:

- What you did for the day (try to make sure that every new moment is a new paragraph)
- What conversation you had (include some direct speech)
- What inspired you about this person, or what disappointed you
- What you will always remember or cherish about the day
- Use your five senses to give details
- Involve the reader in the story by showing rather than telling
- Include as much detail as possible to paint a picture of the character
- Make sure that your story has a high point (climax) and an interesting ending
- Make sure that you give a clear picture of the place/s you visited and the celebrity's character, appearance and habits
- Use some figurative language (such as similes or metaphors) to create a clear mental picture for your reader
- Use first-person narration
